1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an apparatus and a method for receiving a packet transmitted through a wireless communication path.
2. Description of the Related Art Recently, in addition to a wireless network such as a Wireless Fidelity (WiFi) network, a wireless network based on a wireless communication system such as a 3GPP Long Term Evolution (LTE) (hereinafter, referred to as an LTE-based system) or a 3GPP LTE Advanced (hereinafter, referred to as an LTE-A-based system) has been introduced. As the LTE and the LTE-A-based system are evolving to a 4G communication system, a request for an increase in data transmission rate and a reduction in a latency has increased. Particularly, for the LTE-based system, a request for an increase in data transmission rate has increased because the LTE-based system can provide a higher throughput than the current WiFi system. For the LTE-based system, a request for a reduction in a latency has increased because the LTE-based system is an IP-based communication system supporting a data-oriented service such as an Internet search or an Instant Messaging (IM) service. Therefore, the LTE-based system has a technical limitation in that the LTE-based system cannot provide a higher data transmission rate than a maximum throughput of a radio communication channel. However, the LTE-based system is a radio communication system in which a transmission rate can be changed depending on an amount of radio resources needed to perform communication. Thus, the LTE-based system is configured to switch to a communication method having a smaller radio resource occupancy ratio to thereby minimize the radio resource occupancy ratio. Accordingly, the LTE-based system can adaptively process a service that is scheduled in an uplink or a downlink according to a radio state and a resource condition (state) of a wireless communication channel. The radio state means a radio resource situation including quality of a downlink radio link and a condition of a communication path from a base station to a user equipment. For example, the radio state may be classified into a deep fading state and an edge-
